READING

I. Read the passage given below.

1. Stress is not a novel phenomenon. In fact, the word stress was first used in the fifteenth century. Since the turn of the twentieth century, however, the social consciousness of life's stress has risen dramatically. Stress and anxiety have become common terms.

2. Environment provides human beings with certain harsh incentives and demands, which as long as their intensity and frequency are within the limits of human tolerance, can stimulate their motivation and enhance their productivity. However, when these environmental demands become excessive it leads to stress.

3. Hans Selye, who first began piecing together the puzzle of human stress, holds that it is immaterial whether the agent or situation we face is pleasant or unpleasant; all that counts is the intensity of the demand for readjustment or adaptation. Stress is the body's response to external changes that place demands upon us, both physically and mentally. Stress is neutral, in itself it has no connotation; it is neither positive nor negative. There really is no such thing as plain 'stress'; stress is actually classified into one of two types of stress: eustress or distress.

4. Hans Selye, came up with this theory of distress versus eustress in 1975 when he published his theory. Eustress, the good stress, can sometimes be beneficial; sharpening our senses and providing the adrenaline rush needed to conquer deadlines and multi-tasking. Distress occurs when an individual cannot adapt to stress. It is the harmful stress that can, even in short bursts, depress your immune system, cause weight gain. Over a period of time it can lead to brain neurons dying from atrophy; it puts one at a greater risk for a range of medical conditions including blood pressure, diabetes and heart disease.

5. Eu, a Greek prefix for "healthy", is used in the same sense in the word 'euphoria'. Role models who push us to exceed our limits, physical training that removes our spare tires, and risks that expand our sphere of comfortable action are all examples of eustress – stress that is healthful and the stimulus for growth. Eustress can be defined as pleasant or positive stress. In fact, eustress or controlled stress may sometimes be encouraged as it gives us our competitive edge during performance-related activities. Any performance-related activity, a sports-related game or even a job interview has an optimal amount of stress that can prove to be beneficial. Positive stress lends focus and provides the ability to think quickly, clearly and effectively express your thoughts. We should invite and cultivate as much eustress in our lives as we can tolerate. Eustress makes us grow, it makes us stronger, and it makes us better people. Whether it's physical or mental, eustress is resistance training for our lives! Eustress is lifting weights at the gym to build your muscles. Eustress is riding a roller coaster or watching an enjoyable horror flick. Eustress is a challenging work project that you enjoy using your creative abilities to solve.

6. Often the main problem with distress is that you don't know when it's going to end. To turn distressed into eustress we can try thinking of the stresses as temporary. One of the best ways to convert distress into eustress is to not try to do a million things at one time, take a big goal and cut it into small pieces, that way you can work more productively and efficiently.

7. Another way to convert your negative experiences into positive experiences is by reframing your stress sensation, for example, if you are anxious about a certain situation, reframe it as if it was excitement.

8. Next time you're feeling stressed because you're sitting in traffic, or you're running late, or your exams are round the corner – notice the feelings and thoughts that arise within yourself. Be aware of your breath, your heart rate, your emotions, your thoughts...and when you feel your heart start to pound, when you notice you are breathing rapidly and more shallow, when you feel your emotions are in a fight or flight state – realize that you are NOT in a life or death situation, you are NOT running for your life from a lion! Simple awareness can dissolve the association we make between distress and ourselves.

9. Create processes to filter out the distress from your life, while creating environments that foster helpful eustress. By saying YES to eustress and NO to distress, we allow the positive stressors into our lives that provide healthy resistance and facilitate our growth, while keeping out the harmful garbage that does nothing but damage us!

II. Read the passage given below.

We all have been affected by the current COVID-19 pandemic. However, the impact of the pandemic and its consequences are felt differently depending on our status as individuals and as members of society. While some try to adapt to working online, homeschooling their children and ordering food via Instacart, others have no choice but to be exposed to the virus while keeping society functioning. Our different social identities and the social groups we belong to determine our inclusion within society and, by extension, our vulnerability to epidemics. COVID-19 is killing people on a large scale.

As of October 10, 2020, more than 7.7 million people across every state in the United States and its four territories had tested positive for COVID-19. According to the New York Times database, at least 213,876 people with the virus have died in the United States.[1] However, these alarming numbers give us only half of the picture; a closer look at data by different social identities (such as class, gender, age, race, and medical history) shows that minorities have been disproportionately affected by the pandemic. These minorities in the United States are not having their right to health fulfilled.

According to the World Health Organization’s report Closing the Gap in a Generation: Health Equity through Action on the Social Determinants of Health, “poor and unequal living conditions are the consequences of deeper structural conditions that together fashion the way societies are organized—poor social policies and programs, unfair economic arrangements, and bad politics.”[2] This toxic combination of factors as they play out during this time of crisis, and as early news on the effect of the COVID-19 pandemic pointed out, is disproportionately affecting African American communities in the United States. I recognize that the pandemic has had and is having devastating effects on other minorities as well, but space does not permit this essay to explore the impact on other minority groups. As noted by Samuel Dickman et al.: economic inequality in the US has been increasing for decades and is now among the highest in developed countries ... As economic inequality in the US has deepened, so too has inequality in health.

Both overall and government health spending are higher in the US than in other countries, yet inadequate insurance coverage, high cost sharing by patients, and geographical barriers restrict access to care for many.[8] Similarly, American Public Media reported on the COVID-19 mortality rate by race/ethnicity through July 21, 2020, including Washington, DC, and 45 states (see figure 1). These data, while showing an alarming death rate for all races, demonstrate how minorities are hit harder and how, among minority groups, the African American population in many states bears the brunt of the pandemic’s health impact. Approximately 97.9 out of every 100,000 African Americans have died from COVID-19, a mortality rate that is a third higher than that for Latinos (64.7 per 100,000), and more than double than that for whites (46.6 per 100,000) and Asians (40.4 per 100,000). The overrepresentation of African Americans among confirmed COVID-19 cases and number of deaths underscores the fact that the coronavirus pandemic, far from being an equalizer, is amplifying or even worsening existing social inequalities tied to race, class, and access to the health care system.

LITERATURE

This section has sub-sections: VI, VII, VIII, IX. There are a total of 25 questions in the section. Attempt any 22 questions from the sub-sections VI TO IX.

VI. Read the given extract to attempt questions that follow:

MY grandmother, like everybody's grandmother, was an old woman. She had been old and wrinkled for the twenty years that I had known her. People said that she had once been young and pretty and had even had a husband, but that was hard to believe. My grandfather's portrait hung above the mantelpiece in the drawing room. He wore a big turban and loose-fitting clothes. His long, white beard covered the best part of his chest and he looked at least a hundred years old. He did not look the sort of person who would have a wife or children. He looked as if he could only have lots and lots of grandchildren. As for my grandmother being young and pretty, the thought was almost revolting. She often told us of the games she used to play as a child. That seemed quite absurd and undignified on her part and we treated it like the fables of the Prophets she used to tell us.

Q.36 “The thought of her mother being young and pretty once was revolting” shows-

- A. That grandmothers can't be young and pretty in their youth.
- B. The writer had been witnessing his grandmother to be old and wrinkled since long so it was hard for him to believe that she was once young and pretty.
- C. One does not even think about the beauty of one's grandmother.
- D. The writer opposed the idea of being his grandmother to be ugly in her youth.

Q.37 What, according to the writer, was quite absurd and undignified on grandmother's part –

- A. That she used to tell a lie that she played games when she was a child.
- B. That she used to play games as a child.
- C. That playing games by girls was almost impossible.
- D. All the above.

Q.38 Choose the most appropriate statement-

- A. His grandfather used to be very handsome at one point of time.
- B. His grandfather had a lots of grandchildren.
- C. His grandfather is still alive.
- D. The writer had never seen his grandfather alive.

Q.39 Which of the following characteristics, describes the grandmother aptly-

- A. Absurd
- B. Undignified
- C. Wrinkled
- D. Revolting

Q.40 The word 'absurd' means the same as-

- A. Revolting
- B. Illogical
- C. Useless
- D. Logical

VII. Read the given extract to attempt questions that follow:

I must draw your attention to this aspect of Ranga's character. He knew when it would be to his advantage to talk to someone and rightly assessed people's worth. As for his namaskara to me, he did not do it like any present-day boy —with his head up towards the sun, standing stiff like a pole without joints, jerking his body as if it was either a wand or a walking stick. Nor did he merely fold his hands. He bent low to touch my feet. “May you get married soon,” I said, blessing him. After exchanging a few pleasantries, I left.

- Q.41 Why did the narrator want to draw reader's attention towards Ranga's character?
- A. As Ranga is the protagonist of the story.
 - B. As Ranga is the example of bad character.
 - C. As the narrator is bound to tell the qualities of Ranga.
 - D. All the above.
- Q.42 The difference between the ways of greeting by Ranga and other modern boys-
- A. Ranga stood still just bending his neck while other boys folded their hands.
 - B. Ranga bowed low while other so called modern boys stood stiff like a pole.
 - C. Ranga never bowed while other boys bowed respectfully.
 - D. No difference.
- Q.43 Which trait/ traits of Ranga's character is/are mentioned here-
- A. When to talk to someone.
 - B. The way he used to offer namaskara to others.
 - C. Keeping himself rooted to his traditions.
 - D. Above all.
- Q.44 Which figure of speech is used in "jerking his body as if it was either a wand or a walking stick."
- A. Metaphor
 - B. Simile
 - C. Hyperbole
 - D. Alliteration
- Q.45 The word 'pleasantries' is referred here as –
- A. Chats
 - B. Prayers
 - C. Greetings
 - D. Wishes
