READING

I. Read the passage below

1. Budding micro-entrepreneurs today are emerging from towns and cities in the hinterlands of India. The COVID-19 pandemic opened doors to an entirely new business proposition for Satara-based Savita Dishe, who sold brooms at a weekly haat. When the markets shut due to the lockdown, Dishe obviously went out of business. As the lockdown eased a couple of months later, Satara witnessed a high rate of reverse migration. People working in cities such as Mumbai and Pune got back to their villages, and this gave Dishe her new business idea, which was to start a snack business.
2. Since the pandemic restricted movement, Dishe resorted to technology. She started a WhatsApp group and told people not only in her village but also in adjoining villages that she made the best Mumbai-style vada-pav in the vicinity. She soon had a beeline of patrons. She took orders online and also started billing and receiving payments online. She also sourced her ingredients online. A month later, when she got her license from Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) for her kitchen, Dishe became the first woman in her family to run a business of a certain scale.
3. COVID-19 has seen a spurt of women entrepreneurs in rural India like Savita Dishe, who have not just turned into savvy entrepreneurs but have also embraced digital solutions. Pre-COVID, it was difficult to operate these businesses and scale. Post COVID digitalisation has accelerated. Women in rural India are calling for enabling tools to start their business.
4. Women are coming to digital platforms not just for financial transaction but also to market their products. For marketing their products digitally, they have to make it attractive too. For instance Roopali a resident of Satara, who transformed her school uniform business into a mask-manufacturing outfit during the COVID months. She used the cloth she had bought to make uniforms into masks and her first customer was the Maharashtra police. She trained her staff virtually, bought raw material through virtual platforms and even created visibility for her products digitally. Roopali has, till date, sold a million masks.

5. Around 17 per cent men lost their jobs, as opposed to 23 per cent women. Women were disproportionately impacted by COVID last year, but they have been disproportionately innovative during the lockdown.

II. Read the passage given below

Eating a balanced and varied diet and establishing healthy eating habits promotes young people's health, growth and intellectual development. WHO guidance to Member States on healthy diets encourages all people, but particularly adolescents, to eat less food that is high in calories, fats, free sugars or salt/sodium, and more fruit, vegetables and dietary fibre, such as whole grains.

Some diet-related behaviours are particularly important during adolescence. Regularly eating breakfast, for example, helps to reduce snacking and consumption of energy-rich foods. It also increases intake of essential micronutrients, including iron, calcium and vitamins C, B and D, and fibre. Skipping breakfast remains very common among young people, however, is associated with other unhealthy behaviours such as sedentary behaviours.

Some food groups are hugely important during adolescence. Fruit and vegetable consumption during childhood is linked to many positive short- and long-term health outcomes, Most countries recommend the consumption of five or more portions (> 400 g) of fruit and vegetables a day, but adolescents in many eat far fewer.

Healthy eating behaviours become less common as young people move through adolescence, with the frequency of breakfast consumption and eating fruit decreasing between ages 11 and 15.

Soft-drink consumption increases with age, with significant differences between 11- and 15-year-olds found in 23 countries and regions for boys and 16 for girls. Age differences may be attributed, in part, to greater independence in food choice as children grow older.

Eating breakfast on weekdays varies substantially across countries and regions, from 92% of 11-year-old boys doing so to 34% of 15-year-old girls. It is higher among boys, especially at ages 13 and 15.

Levels of daily fruit consumption are generally below recommended levels. While they are higher among girls, rates are still relatively low. Frequency of having evening meals with the family can also be explored for considerable variation.

Soft-drink consumption is more common among boys at all ages, except among 11-year-olds in Ireland and 13-year-olds in Israel, where girls are more likely to report it.

Certain types of foods and drinks should be limited to special occasions and are not suitable in the context of a healthy diet. Soft-drinks intake is higher among adolescents than in other age groups and is a matter of concern. Research shows that children with the highest intake of sugar-sweetened beverages are more likely to be overweight or obese than those with low intakes. Sugar-sweetened soft drinks are the main source of free sugars in children and adolescents' diets.
